HOLMES PUBLISHING GROUP LLC POSTAL BOX 2370 SEQUEM WA 98382 USA Mante has exercised the deepest influence upon mankind from remote antiquity unto our own days. It either formed part of the religion of the country, so it was the case in ancient Egypt and Bebylon and so it is now in some forms of Buddhism (Tibet), or lived as independent life also by side with the recognised religion. In some instances it was tolerated, or rendered less aboutlons, by a possible endivision into white or bundleds and black or cell magic, or was downright personated. Wherever we go, however, and especially if we turn to the popular beliefs that rule the no-called civilized nations, we shall always and everywhere find a complete system of magical formulas and incantations. The belief in the witch and winard, and their powerful filters and charms, holds still stronger away upon human imagination than appears at first night.

It is remarkable that we do not possess a good work, or enhancing study, on the history and development of Magic. It is true that we find allowious to it, and sometimes special shapters devoted to the charms and incentations and other superstitious contons prevailing among various nations in books dealing with such nations. But a comprehensive study of Magic is still a pious (or impious) wish. One cannot gained that such an undertaking would present extreme difficulties. The restorial is far too vast, and is scattered over numberless nations and ammarous literatures. Besides, such of anglest times has disappeared; in fact, there is a prefeated gap between antiquity and medern times which is not by any ments bridged over by the literature of the Middle Ages. In them times magical art and practice were ruthlessly personated by the Church, and the Councils tress with desanciations against the work of the Evil One. Moreover, it was connected in a certain degree with the tunchings and practices of the various heretical sects, and the pursuit was anything but harmless. Thus it comes about that on exhaustive study of the origin and development of Magic is still a wish for the fature, and the full influence which it has exercised upon mankind connot be investigated in auch a manner as to have a scientific value until at least s pertion of the ancient literature will again have some to light.

The syncretistic character of the Guestic teachings shows itself also in the adoption of Magic, and in the spiritual interpretation with which they invested the forum and formulae of Magin. The adherents of the various teachings of the Gunstice, and ospecially those that fived in Egypt and Palestine, adopted all the ideas that were floating about and transferred them into their system of superior Unosis.

If anything of the teachings of the Guesties has rarylynd, it is the theumaturgical portion of it. This has always been popular with the money, so it offseded them those means which they wanted to defend themselves against the attacks of sames evil spirits, and to the more speculative minds it afforded a clue to the mystery of the agiverse. It gave them the mesas to sublee and to put to their service the unknown forces of nature. This lies at the root of the general acceptance of magic formulas and nuchantments, and gives to this practice the popularity which it still retains.

Being the most formidable sects that assumed an anti-Christian character, although some are anterior to Christianity, the Guesties were the first to be estacked by the Fathers of the Church. Most of the ancient writings of the Fathern are filled with polemics against heretics, of which these are the foremest. The result of this compaign, which lasted for conturies, has been the absolute destruction of all the writings of the Guestice. Sparse and Incoherent fragments only have come down to us, and we are now compelled to study their systems and superstitions, if we may call them m, from the writings of their antagonists, Irenana and Hippolytes, Tertullian and Epiphanica, A. single exception is the work known as "Pistia Sophia," the date of whose composition is variously assigned to the second or fourth century. It certainly seems to belong to a later stage in the development of the Grania, as it contains some of the later ideas. It has come down to us in a very had state of preservation.

Within the last few years the soil of Egypt has rendered some more fragments of this kind of literature, and magic Papyri have now enriched our hitherto very scenty stock of gengine ancient literature. These belong to the second and third century, and, being exclusively of Egyptian origie, threw an enexpected light apon the form which Magie assumed under the influence of the new order of ideas. It is a fact that nothing is so stable and constant than this kind of mystical literature. The very nature of a mystic formula prevents it from ever being radically changed. As there is no other reason for its efficacy than the form in which it is protonded to have been fixed or revealed to the Select by the Divinity itself, any change of that form would immediately destroy its efficacy. Droad preserved the form intert, at least as long as the practitioner stood under the inflamos of those divinities whose power he invoked for protection, or se long as he believed in the power of those democs whose malignant influence he tried to evert by means of that form of enchastment. This explains the uniformity of a number of such charms in whetever language we find them and almost to whatever time they may belong; or long as they are the outcome of one and the same set of religious ideas, which is the determining factor. Het with the change of religion the charms also undergo changes, not in the form but in the masse of the divinities invoked, and those bring other changes with them. To take a modern ensemple, the charm against the Evil Eye will contain the name of Christ or of a Saint in a Christian charm, the same of Muhammed in the Muhammedau, and that of an angel or a mysterious name of God in the Jawish formula, though all the rust would be identical. The same process happened also in ancient times, and the Papyri mentioned above seeint as in tracing the change which the new order of ideas had introduced in the magical formulae of the Christian ora.

If we trace the first impulse of these changes to the Spoatice, we must at ouce nemeriate it with the sects of Rescore and Theresposis that awarmed in Egypt and Palcetine, and with the most important sect of Gasetics which produced the greatest impression, i.e. that represented by Valentin. His is the one against whom most of the polessics of the Fathers of the Church were directed. He is the author of the most prefound and luxuriant, so well as the most inflanatial and the best known, of the Gnostic systems. He was probably of Egyptian-Jewish descent; and be derived his material from his own fertile imagination, from Oriental and Greak spoculations, and from Christian idean! In his system entered also the mystical combinations of letters and signs known under the name of nabbalistic formulas, and he moreover favoured the permutations and combinations of letters to express divine names and attributes. To him we owe the theory of Mone and the Sysygies, or divise creative pairs, of which the two first form tegether the sucred "Tetraktys." I believe this to be the Guestic counterpart of the enered "Tetragrammation," and not, as has hitherto been assumed by others, the Tetraktys of the Pythagoruns. For one one see in his system, and more m in the mystical part of it, the direct influence of the Jewish mystical speculations of the time. Valentin lived, mereover, in Palestins, and nothing would suit him better then to menipulate that mystical, Ineffable Name of God, round which a whole system had been evolved in the service of the Tomple. Angelology and mysterious names of God and His angels are, mercover, intimately connected with the above-mentioned eacts.

The expeterious Ineffeble Name of the divinity which is invoked seems to be the centre of most of the angient and even modern Magio. By knowing that Name, which is assumed to be the name by means of which the world was created, the man or exerciser in Egypt pretended to constrain the god to obey his wishes and to give affect to his investion if called by his true name; whilet in Chalden the mysterious Name was considered a real and divise being, who had a personal existence, and therefore anticalve power ever the other gods of a less elevated rank, over nature, and the world of spirits. In Egyptian magic, even if the exercisors did not understand the language from which the Kame was borrowed, they considered it necessary to putain it in its primitive form, as another word would not have the same virtue. The author of the treatise on the Egyptian mysteries attributed to Jamblichus maintains that the burbarens names taken from the dialects of Egypt and Assyria have a mysterious and ineffable virtue on account of the great antiquity of these languages. The use of each unjutelligible words can be traced in Egypt to a very great actiquity."

It is necessary to point out these things in order to understand the character of the new formulas which take now the place of the cid. To the old and in time utterly quintelligible names, new names were either added or substituted, and the sommon neares of many of these names in Jewish mystical speculation. The Ineffable Name of God and the four of pronouncing it can be traced to a comparatively remote antiquity. We find in those uncient writings that have retained the traditions of the empturies before the compact ore, the idea of a form of the Ineffable Name composed of 22, 42, or 72 parts, or words, or letters, of which that consisting of 72 was the most enered. It is still doubtful what those 32, 42, and 72 wereeither different words expressing the various attributes of God, or letters in a mystical combination; but whatever these may have been they took the plane of the Inaffable mystical name and were credited with the relicance astounding powers. By means of these every miracle could be dece and everything could be schieved. All the powers of nature, all the spirits and demona could be subdued, and in fact there was no barrier to human aspiration. The heavens were moreover peopled at a very early age with numberless angels arranged in a hierarchical order and each endowed with a special Nume, the knowledge of which was no lass desirable for working miracles. I need only allude to Dionysius Areopagita to have mentioned a complete treaties of such a divise accounty recognized by the Church, but we can go much higher up and find these divisions and subdivisions of the celestial hosts recorded in books that belong to the second ers before Christ. In the Book of Esoch (ch. vi) we have a long list of such names of angula, and in a book, the date of which has been differently put, the names of angels are still more numerous, to which there are added also various names of God. The book in question pretends to be a vision of the High Priest Ismael, and is a description of the heavenly Halls. Modern scholars who know nothing of the Opostic and other beretic literature put it as late as the ninth century, simply and solely because they could not find early traces of it in the old literature, and because it seemed to appear first in those times. A comparison of it with the Accessio lessler, and still more with a shapter in the "Pistis Sophis," easily convinces us, however, of the fact that challetely similar trustices were known so early as the first conturies after Christ, if they were not, in fact, later remakings of still more ancient tents. The Greek Papyri already alluded to have also this psculiarity in common with these texts, that they abound in similar lists of names of angels and demons borrowed from Egyptian, Christian, and Jewish courses. Among these we find also numerous forms of the Name of God consisting also of a number of letters, 7, 27, and others, and also most curious combinations of letters.

The Jewish idea of a mystical Name of God costs thus upon the interpretation of the Tetragrammaton, or the word JHVH, that stands for God in the Hebrew text, which from very ancient times the priests first and then the whole people refrained from aconouncing in the way it was written, A substitute was found for it, so as to svoid a possible profunction of the secred Name. But it is an object of millenery speculation what that substitute really was. As already remarked, it is represented by a changing number of elements, letters or words. The original mireculous, powerful Name, however, was the Tetrugrammaton known as the "Shem he-molorush." This word has presented great difficulties to the following generations. It can be translated either as meaning septicit, the "explicit" Name of God, whilst the others are merely substitutes, or apprents, the name which is used exclusively for the designation of the Divinity. Those two are the best known and most widely accepted interpretations of the "Elsen ha-mefersah." In the light, however, of our study it will appear that another translation will henceforth be found to be the only true one, at any rate for ancient times. Later on the true morning of this expression was last, and one or the other of the first-mentioned philological translations was adopted. So we find in the Testament of Solomon, s.g., "the angel called Aphoph, which is interpreted as Rufael." [This expression proves that it is based upon a Hobrow original, and that the word "perush" wee taken to meen "[eterpretation."] Considering that this pame was believed to be the only free Name of God, the all-powerful name which was never prenounced, "Shem he-moforcek" can only mean the Ineffable, as we find it also in the "Pistis Sophia," and all throughout the ancient tradition. It is no explorates; instead of saying: it is the "Ineffable" unatterable mane, they used the word which meant: it is the "explicit" name, just as they said for a "blind" man—he is "full of light"; other examples can be easily address. In this way an ancient mystery and a stambling-block for the translator of such texts disappears.

As the Tetragrammaton, or "Blem he-mefermle," was the Ineffable Name, and could by no means over he uttered, others were substituted and were used by the priest when blessing the people. These also were endewed with a special sanctity, and were revealed only to the initiated. These substitutes were considered to be no less effective for miracles, and the knowledge of these mysterious Names was no less desirable than that of the true Tetragrammaton, for they were believed to represent the exact pronunciation of the farbidden word, and thus to contain part, if not the whole, of the power with which the Tetragrammeton itself was invested. Rab, a scholar who had studied in Palestine towards the end of the second century, says of these substituted names, and more especially of that of forty-two elements (Tv. Eidduchin, fol. 71e); "That this Name is to be revealed only to a men who stands in the middle of his life, who is plous and modest, who never gives way to enger and to drink, who is not obstinate. Wheever knows that Name and preserves it in parity is beloved in heaven and beloved upon earth; is wall considered by men and inherite both worlds."1 What these forty-two may have been has thue far been the object of speculation. When comparing the ancient tradition with the new texts in the Papyri, and in the mystical texts of Hebrew literature, there can no longer be any doubt that the Name of forty-two, or more or less, elements could not have been originally anything else but south consisting of that sember of letters, which were substituted in the public propunciation for the Ineffable Name consisting of one own and only four letters—the Tetrogrammaton! In time these sumstitutes were also torgetten, or not divulged, and thus areas a series of new substitutes and variations for the divise Name. There was also the four of profining the name of God when writing it down in the way it occurred in the Bible, and therefore they reserted to manifold devices on the one hand to avoid a possible profauntion, and on the other to obtain mored or mysterious substitutes for the Ineffable Name.

Another element that come within the purview of this ectivity of coining new names was the new and greatly developed engelology that flourished at that time in Palestine and Egypt. The angels had to be provided with appropriate and powerful names, and the authors reported to the same devices, of which I mention the most prominent, and which are the cause of many of the barbarous forms and names that abound in the magical rites and formulas and in the se-called practical Cabbalab. The biblical names of Michael, Gabriel, and others with the termination -of m God, secred as a model for some of the new angels, such as in the Book of Enough and its other similar writings. The first part was, as a rule, taken from the characteristic attribute connected with the activity of that new angel; so Replacedon the bealing angel, in the Book of Tobit: Remist so the angel of the mysteries; and in the espe manner a host of similar names. Then came into requisition the system of permutation of the letters of the divine parse; one stroding first was placed at the end, and so on. Much more extensively were the change in the order or the substitution of other letters reserted to. In the Alphabet of R. Akibs no loss than five different systems of this hind of substitutions are enumerated; either the last letter of the alphabet stands for the first (A-t; b-t, B'3 PK. eto.), or one letter stands for the one immediately preceding such, as b for a; or the nighth and fifteenth stand for the first, and so on (Ashes; bet'es, Phil DTM), or first and twelfth are interchangeable (A-I; b-m, D'2 78). One can easily see how differently the same name could be written and employed in the same amulet, and all these various forms representing only me and the mass nesse. The Tetragrammaters appears, therefore, either or PETA or 1920, or 19207, etc. The number of each permutations and substitutions is not limited, however, to those four systems engorated; they are innumerable, and it is almost impossible to find the key for all not with in those mystical writings, and aspecially on the amulata.

Other means employed for the purpose of devicing new variations and protections for the mered name, belonging to the very oldest times, were the combination of free words into one, of which one is a mered name and the other an attribute, but the letters of these two words are intermingled in such a manner that it is not always may to decipher them. An example, which has hitherto not been understood, we have already in the Talmud. The High Priest Issued is said to have seen Jah networker Attriol in the Temple. This word, which stands for the mysterious name of God, is nothing else then the combination of the two words "TO Ele-Crown and Arial, from Issish zwiz, I. In the text, which I publish here, we have the name up the Shihaimway Soldel and per-Hak=mighty, powerful. Kames were further formed by leaving out one or two letters from the Tetragrammatou or from other moral names of the Bible, the primary reason always being to avoid the possibility of profunction, as the profans utterance of the divine name brought heavy penalty apon the culprit. In this manner is the obscure explanation in the Temple to be understood, VII 'Mt Ami sin, instead of the usual "O Lord" (belp us): in each of them two words one letter has been left out-the of in the first, Arbi, and the second A fa the second word. On other pocasions strange letters were inserted between those of the divine name, and thus we get the passling form (Tr. Synbadrin, Stem vii. 6) which is mentioned when the blasphemer who had blasphemed God was brought before the judget. The judges sak the witnesses to repeat the bloophemy attered by the accused, and they say, instead of mentioning the Divine Name, the words 'EN' PROTEN' 173's, which may have obtained this form in our printed texts through popular otymology, meaning "Jose best Jose!" But originally we have here clearly the Tetragrammaton 1777, and a stronge letter inserted after each letter of that word, viz. 3, 3, 13, and 30.

This precess continues still unto our very days, but from the thirteenth or foorteenth century manages a change has taken place in the system of the formation of those mysteriess words, considered to be an officacious in stealets. The initials of the words of a biblios) were are combined into a now word without any meaning, or the letters of a worse are so arranged as to form uniform words of three letters without meaning, the commencement of each of these words being the letters of the Hebrew words arranged consecutively. The most celebrated example as the new to which Exades air, IN-21 has been put for many a century. But these are a mark of more recent origin, and not a trace is to be found throughout the whole socieut mystical literature, and also not in our text.

If we should apply these principles to the Greek Papyri, there is no doubt that a key might be found for the innumerable curious names which crowd these fragments of a literature that at one time must have been very rich, Trucca of it we find also in the "Pietie Sophia," where special stress is laid upon that Ineffable Name, communicated only to the initiated. The knowledge which a man acquires through the "Nomen Inadiabile" is described at some length (pp. 131-153). In another place we read that Jesus spoke the Great Name over the disciples whilst preaching to them, and blew afterwards into their eyes, by which they were made to see a great light (p. 233). The mysterious names of God and of the Powers are enumerated on pp. 223 and 234-5, whilst the following passage explains the power of that Namo;-"There is no greater mystery than this. It leads your woul to the light of lights, to the places of truth and goodness, to the region of the most hely, to the place where there is neither man nor woman mer any definite shape, but a constant and inexpressible light. Nothing higher exists then these mysteries after which ye seek. Three are the mysteries of the seven voices, and their forty-nine Powers, and their numbers, and no mone is esperior to that Name in which all the other names are contained, and all the Lights, and all the Powers. If anyone knows that Name when he goes out of the meterial body, neither arooks nor darknoss, seither Archon, angel, or archangel, would be able to hust the seal which knows that Name. And if it be epoken by sayone going out from the world and mid to the fire, it will be extinguished; and to the darknow, and it will disappear; and if it he said to the demons and to the satellites of the external darkness. to Its Archons, and to its lards and powers, they will all perish, and their flame will burn those on that they exclaim; 'Thou art boly, Thou art holy, the Hely of all the Hely.' And if that Name is said to the judges of the wicked, and to their lords and all their powers, and to Barbelo and the lavisible God, and to the three Gods of triple power, so soon as that Name is uttared in those regions they will fall one upon the other, so that being destroyed they perish and exclaim: 'Light of all the Lights, who art in the infinite lights, have mercy upon us and parify os." This is almost identical with the saying of Rab, with the difference that in the "Pistis Sophia" the Egyptian influence is not yet wholly obliterated These examples suffer to show the character of the central point in the new Magio adopted by the Gnostics, viz , the mysterious Divine Name and its substitutes derived from the mystical speculations of Palestine, and also the general tendency of syncretism and absorption of various forms and invocations in that form of Magio which benceforth will have the deepest influence upon the imagination and ballef of the nations of the West.

From that period, then, up to the twelfth or thirteenth century there is a gap which seither Peelles nor the Testament of Solomon fill sufficiently. All these socient magical books, being declared the work of the evil spirit, were encounfully heated up and destroyed. The link which binds the literature of the second half of the Middle Ages with the past is missing, and we find suredwee often inco to face with the problem whether a book that appears after that period is of recent origin, ar is an ancient book more or less medified? Such a hook is, for instance, the soculled Sefer Raziel, or the book delivered to Adem by the angel Raziel shortly after he had left Paradise. It is of a composite character, but there is no criterion for the age of the component parts. The result of this uncertainty is that it has been escribed to it. Eleans, of Worms, who lived about the middle of the thirteenth century. One cannot, however, my which portion is due to his own ingressity and which may be dee to ancient texts utilized by him. I om speaking more particularly of this book as it seems to be the primary source for many a magical or, on it is called now, a calibalistical book of the Middle Agos. Trithemiss, the author of "Faust's Hoollengwang," Agrippe, and many more, are deeply indebted to this book for meny of their invocations and conjurations, elthough they must have had besides similar books at their disposal, prohably also the Clavicula Solomonie, the Great Orimogre, etc.

I must still mention one more fregmentary relie of that literature, viz. the inscribed cope and bowls from encirnt Babylon with Aremais (assriptions. These belong partly to the Lecanomantia, and are another example of the constancy of these formulas; for centuries these remain almost unchanged, and even in their latest form have retained a good number of elements from the ancient prototype.

It so happened, then, that some inquisitive men living in Kaironan, in the north of Africa, should address a letter to the then head of the great school in Babylon, Haya Gaza (d. 1637), saking him for information on various topics connected with magio rites and the miraculous powers southed to the Ineffable Name. I give here the gist of more of their questions, which date therefore from the second half of the tenth or the commencement of the oleventh century. They sak first, what it is shout that Ineffable Name and other similar toysterious Names of angels through the mount of which people our make themselves invisible, or tie the hand of rubbers, so they had board from pious men from Palestine and Byzantium that if written upon leaves of meds (Papyri?) or of clive trace and thrown in the face of rebbers would produce that effect; and if written on a potaberd and thrown into the my, salma it; or placed upon a corpse, quickens it to life; and, further, that it shortens the way so that man can travel imments distances in no time. They have also books with these terrible, awe-inspiring Names, and with the enth of those celestial powers of which they are terrified; as they know that the use of these mysterious Names, without due and careful preparation, brings with it calamity and presentary death. To these and other questions the Gard gives a marible and philosophic reply, warning them, in the first fristance, not to place too much oradence on the statements of people who pretend to have seen, but to try and ere with their own nyas. Then he goes on to tall them that such books with mystical names are also to be found in his college, and that one of his predacessors was known to have been addicted to these studies, and to the writing of amulate and the knowledge of incentations, but, he adde, "only a fool believes everything." As for the books with furmulas, he goes on to say: "We have a number of them, such as the book colled 'Sefer be-Yeshes,' and the book called 'The Sward of Moon,' which commences with the words, 'Four angels are appointed to the Board,' and there are in it expited and selections things; there is, further, the book called 'The Great Mystery,' boulden the minor treatises, which are innumerable. And many have laboured in vain to find out the truth of these things." In the course of his reply Haya touches also upon the Ineffable Name and the parce of seventy-two (elements), which, secording to him, was the result of the combination of three biblical verses (of shove, p. 11, where reference is made to Exedua xiv, 19-21), but he writher knows which they are nor how they were attered; as to the other of forty-two, he says that is consisted of forty-two letters, the present attered at which was, however, doubtful, resting morely upon tradition. This name commenced, according to him, with the letters PTVING Algits, and finished with PTVING Shepit. He mentions forther the hooks—"The Great and the Small Heavenly Halls" and "The Lord of the Law," full of such terrifying names and seek which have had that drasded effect upon the uncalled, and from the use of which those before them had shrunk, leet they be punished for incautions yes."

These abstracts suffice to show that the mystical literature had not come to un and with the third or fourth century, but had continued to grow and to exercise its influences throughout the whale intervening period. The reasons why so little is mentioned in the contemporary literature is, that each period has its own predilections, subjects which about almost exclusively the general interest, and are therefore prominently represented by the literature of the time, whilst other things, though in existence, are relegated to an obscure place. The best example we have is the modern folklere literature, that has assumed such large proportions, no one pretending that the subject did not exist throughout the espturies, although neglected by scholars. It must also not be forgotton that we have only frequents of the literature that fourished in Palestine and among the Jews in the Byzantine empire, to which countries this mystical literature belongs. Christian literature leaves no also in the durk for this period, for the reasons stated above : only Syrian might amist us somehow to fill up that gop, but as far as I am aware very little is to be expected from that quarter, so in the whole magnificent collection of the British Museum I have not found a single MS. of charms or magical recipus, except one single, rather modern, Mandajo test. Two very entall, and also rather modern, Syriso MSS. of charms are in the possession of the Rev. H. Gallance.

Of these books now mentioned by Haya Gann in his reply—all of which, by the way, mean to have been irretrievably lost—I have had the good fectures to discover one, will that called "The Second of Moon," of which he gives at the first words. From the answer of Hays it is ovident that he counselered this book to be ald and to be the most important, for he is not establed with merely giving the title as he does with the other books, but he makes an exception for this to indicate the commonwealth and in said that it contained "exalted and wanderful things." A glance at the contents of the early-shapeword text will justify the judgment of Hays, for it is a complete encycloperity of mystical passes, of eschatological teachings, and of magical recipes.

Before statung the contents I must first give a abort description of this MS, now Cod. Habr., Gaster, 178. This tout has some to me with a mast of other leaves full of magical formulas, all in a very bad state of preservation and apparently hopelessly mixed up. Happely there were quainder at the ands of the leaves, and by their means I was enabled, after a long tell and exceful handling of leaves falling to pieces on account of old age and decayed through despress, to recover a good portion of the original Ms. and the whole of this tout, which occupies twelve small quarto leaves. The number of lines varion. The writing belongs to the thirteenth or fourteenth century, and it in Syrian Rabbinical characters. It is evidently a copy from a more springs text, and the copyint has not been very careful in the transcript he made. Many a letter is written wrough, having been mistaken for another similar, such as T (D) for " (E) and D (M) for $1 (8). In many a place there are evident faction, and the courset has often not understood the text. The language is a muxture of Bebrew and Aramane, Hebrew preventing in the first part, which I call the Introductory or historical, as it gives the explanation of the bravenly origin of this text, and donk with all the preliminary meidents connected with the mode of many the text in a proper and efficacions manner. In the last, which I will the theoryical or magnetal part, Armsic prevails. All the discuss are mentioned in the language of the refere, and so size all the plants and horhe, and the other directions are also in the same language, To no harriage, if I may my so, belongs the middle part, which is the real text of the "Bword." This consists of a outsilest of divine and mysterious Names, a good number of which are the outcome of all those modes of manapa-Intions with the letters broofly indicated above. It would be a heppless took to try and decipher those names, and to transliterate them into the original forms of which they are the transformations and mystical equivalents. In this section we can recognise besides the anchangeable character of serse of the magic formulas. What I said before of the Egyptians, who would not change any esered Name. however burburous it may sound, for fear of destroying its afficacy, holds good also for another number of Names found here in a hearlidering variety. Almost arety religion must have contributed to the last that makes up the "Sword." Rejections would be a mild word for this process of general sheerption, that has made the "Sword" thus far the most complete text of magical mysterious Names which has some down to us. A small moyclopadia of a similar character in the Grock Papyres of the British Massum, No. excl. and the Layden Papyres (J. 395), with which our text shows great similarity, but those Papyri mark as it were the first stages of this process of growth by the assignification of various elements and combination anto one single complete refr-serves for the magicles or conserve. In the "Board" we have the full development of that process, which must have run its course at a very early period.

Nothing is more fallacious than to try stymologies of proper names. The omission or addition of one latter by a careless copyist suffices to lead un completely astray. It is, therefore, difficult to advance stry interpretation of even a few of the names found in this text that have a familiar appearance. If we were sure of the reading, we might recognize among those in No. 6, Inc. (Apraxis, Veronica), Osiris, Abrezza, and others; but, so already remarked, such an identification sught easily lead as astray, and the coincideness toight only he the result of mere chance. No doubt can, however, he sotertained as to the complex character of this text, and to the astogoding form of many of the names which it contains. It is a systematically arranged collection; in the apparent disorder there is order; and the names are placed according to certain seeding features which they have in semicon-Thus we have a long string of names that are composed with the word Schooth (Nos. 24-37); others that ere the possponents of the davine of (Non. 103-34). More starting still is a list of supposed names of heavenly powers that are represented as sees of other powers. These are undenbtodly derived from many courses, the enther welding smaller tests and lists (ato one comprehensive list. The third part contains the directions for the application of them various Names. These are also arrenged according to a certain system. The diseases follow, at any rate in the first portion, the order of the members in the busine body, commencing with the head and ste parts, then descendent to the lower members; after which follow recipra for nilments of a different nature, to be followed by the directions for performing muscles and other remarkable feats.

Each of these 136 items (numbered by me) corresponds with a certain portion of Part II, the words or the trystical Names of those portions in Part II being the mysterious words that alone were the proper to have the expected respical result. In order to facilitate research, I have subdivided Part II and such accurepositing portions to which I give the same number. There is then as absolute paralleless between the two parts—one the text and the other its magnetic application. We see that the book has been very methodically arranged by one who intended to prepare as complete a magical book as possible. By this paralleless, and by the partial repetition of the mysterious words in Part III, we have the means to estimy ourselves as to the accuracy of the copyint, who does not come out very entidectorily from this test. It may be that the original from which he copied was plready partly corrupt, and the fear which such books inspired prevented him from attempting to correct what are obvious twistakes in the spelling of those Names. It not seldem happens that the more Name is written in two or three different forms in one and the same recipe. I have also not attempted only correction, as we have no means to decide which of these seems between is the tree and which the corrupt. Another remain why the copyrist may be exempted from at losst some of these inconsistenties, is the fact that he gives in many places what are intended to be different suddings. He starte his copy with the marginal note, unfortunately half gone, the paper being destroyed in that plane, that "there are differences of opinion as to the readings of the text and of the Names." or, as I would enterpret this mutilated glosse, " the marginal readings are cario lections." For, in fact, there are a good number of marginal glosses throughout Parts I and II.

There also are some in Part III, but these are of a totally different character. They are purely philological, and furnula one powerful proof more both for the antiquity of the test with which we are dealing and for the country where the Mth. has been expeed. Most, if not all, those glosses are, nessely. Arobot translations of the Aramaio words of the original. By the mintekes that have grept this three Arabia glosses, it is evident that they have not been added by the copyist, who surely would have known how to write his own translation, but who would make mistakes when copying shother MN., seponally if it were in any way hadly written or had suffered in consequence of age. The translation further preven that the original was written at a time when Aremais wee the lenguage of the people, and that at a certain time when the copy was made from which this MS, is a transmipt the language of the original had begun to be forgetten and required a translation, which, by the way, is not always exact. The Areman of this text is, in fact, not easy to understand; there occur in it many words of plants and discount which I have not found in any decimary in existence, and many of the grammatical forms present peculiar dialectical variations, which point to Palestine as the original home of our text, and deserve a special study. Here again we have to lement the fact that we deal with an anique manuscript and have no means to test the assurance of the text. But even as it is, this text will prove un extremely valuable contribution to Semitia philology, and would ented even Löw's book on Araman nature of photo, where I have in veta courseled for the names and world securing in our text. I have therefore added a translation, which, however, in some places, done not pretend to be more than an attempt to grapple with a very recalcitrant text.

The title of the book seems to be derived from the last words spoken by Moses before his death. He muclades his blessing of the Children of Israel with these words (Deuter, max 6, 29); "Who is like unto thee, a people myed by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and that is the Sword of thy excellency," or "thy executent Sword." The figurative" Sword" spoken of here must have been taken at a later time to signify more than a figure of speech. Under the influence of the mystical interpretative of Bomptors flourishing at a very welly period, it was taken to denote a peculiar form of the divine Name, excellent and all-powerful, which neved as a should and protection. It therefore could be made to serve this purpose in magical incentations, which did not appeal to the seristance of demone but to the heavenly hosts obeying the command. of the Master of that "Sword," There is no wonder, then, that it came to be connected with the same of Moses, the year man who spake of it, and whose had words were of that "Sword," In the Greek Papyri, Moore to mentioned so one who keeps divine mysteries (Brit. Man., Pap. alvi, of the fourth century, lines 109 ff., ed. Kenyon, in Catalogue, 1893, p. 68, and note to 11); and again, in another Papyrus, excl. of the third century (Red. p. 164, 1, 619 and note), a reference to one of the magical books ascribed te Moore, called "The Crown of Moses." But what is more important still, the Leydon Papyres calls itself the eighth Book of Mosse. It resembles very much our text. which has thus proserved the old name by which many of there magned books went. Dieterich, who published the Loyden Pappres (Abrazas, Leipzig, 1891), holes to Orphio origins for that magical composition and lays too great stress on the Connegony in it. In the light of our text it will become swident that these go all bank to one common source, via to the mystical speculations of those sects, which he hisself assumerates (pp. 136 ff.); and the "Logon obrailton" quoted by him from the Paris Provens tibid. pp. 138-141) shows more clearly still the same sources for all these compositions. The everwhelming importance saugued in them taxts to the "boly Name" enauating of a number of letters, and the book calling land "The Work of Moses on the Holy Name," justify us in sooing in it an exact parallel to the Hebrew text, recovered now by ton. There is much internal similarity between the Hobers "Herord" and the Greek Papyri. The order of subjects is circular; all commence with an exchatological part, which in the Greek is more in the nature of a Compogney, in the Hobrew that of the description of the heavenly hierarchy. In both follows the "Name," and after that a list of megical recipes which rufer back to that Name. The constant refersion of the Layden Papyrus after each runipe in a "Say the Name!" Here the Name is still simple: in the Hebrew text it is represented by the rich variety which I have pointed out, but an internal connection between these various texts cannot be doubted.

There exists beader another small treatise (B), also unique, that goes under the same same as "The Sword of Mouse" (Cod. Oxford, 1531, 6). It is a short fragment of a different recruises, and has only a remote resemblance with the first text (A). It consists of a list of mystac Numes, different in their form from the other text, and has only sixteen racipes, which do not correspond with portions only of the first part, but, as in the Layden Papyres, the whole of this was to be repeated after each recipt. Immediately upon this short text follows an invocation of the heavenly Chiefs, attributed to Immel, the High Prices, the reputed suther of the "Beavenly Balle." This addition corresponds to a certain extent with the first part of the "Bword" (A). In page, but very few exceptions, of B is there may trace of Aramaio, and a totally different spirit pervades the whole text. It is in the first place doubtful whether we have here the whole of it or marely a fragment. In two planes we find the latters 33 (NG) and "3 (ND), which taken as numerals mean 63 and 54. If they stand for such, then we have here only the last two or three partiens of a long tant, of which the preceding 52 are masing. Again, on the other hand, as it is regularly recommended to repeat the school of the "Name" after such recipe, up operation that would be well nigh impossible for the mordinate length of that tent, those NG and ND may not stand as numbers of paragraphs. This test presents bender many more pocular traits that make it rather comerkable. We find here thus far the only trace in Rebrew literature of the "Twins" or "Didymoi" which appear an the Guestie homes of the sportyphal Aris of the Apostis Thomas," and are brought into connection with the system of Bardennon. The heavenly Powers mentioned in the "Sword" (A) under the form of some of other Powers, point also to the mine eystem of Bardesanse, of whom Ephrasm Syrus said : "Ho invested male and female belogs, gods and their children." He may have taken these ideas from older sources. However it may be, this conscidence is none the less comerkable. We find further angels with deable names, the one of which I translated "Kunyu," i.e. the proper name, and the other the replicit, i.e. Ineffects nautherable asme. corresponding enterely with that of the Testament of Solomon, where we find "the angel called Apharoph interpreted Rephast" (ve antequire Adapted, & doughteres Padail. -- Orient, 1514, col. 747).

In the Gaostic prayer from the Acts of the Apostle Thomas, the Sophia is spoken of an the one "who knows the mysteries of the Cheers," or, according to the Syriac version, "revenier of the mysteries of the Cheers among the Prophets." With this the passage in the Hebrow test (II) may be compared, where the mine idea is enunciated; and one feels almost tempted to use in the inexplicable word [3°p ("Kinn") the Greek "Kondo," the compation or particles of the mystery; although it samps rather strange to find the very word in the Hebrow text. But there are many words that have a peculiar appearance in this text, and they look like transletarations of Greek words in Hebrow characters, such as "Chartin Hieratikon," etc. I have added, therefore, this second text also, making thus the publication of the "Sword" as complete as possible.

As a second Appendix I have added two conjunctions found in the MS, of the "Sword" (A), both in Aramalo, and extremely enteresting also for their similarity with the luneriptions faside the bank brought from Amyria and Babylon. A detailed study of some of these magin bowls and their encoraptions has been published by M. Schunk?

I have reproduced all three texts as clearly and accurately an possible, without attempting any corrections or emendations, except in the case of obvious mistakes, which are pointed out by me as corrections. The glosses are given as notes, and the few corrections of obvious mistakes. I have refreshed from referring to inscriptions on Ginetic gross and smulets, where we find "Ephesia grammate" similar to those of Part II of the "Sword" (A) and to some of Appendix I, and to the magnesi formulas in the terre-cetta bowls, which present a striking similarity with some partions of "The Sword." One cannot exhaust a subject of this kind, and the atmost one can attempt to do in to place as ample a material as possible at the disposal of those who make the sindy of Magio and theory; and of the so-called practical Cabbalah the object of special enquery. I have limited myself to draw attention to the relation that exists between these, the Greek Papyri, and the Helmew texts which I publish here for the first time, and to point out the important fact that we have now at least one fixed data from which to start in the enquiry of a subject in which datas and times have thus for been very doubtful. It is, moreover, a contribution to Semitte philology, and by the addition of a facilities of the first page a contribution to Semitte palmography.

The origin of the "Sword" is note the less comewhat difficult to fix From the letter of Hays Goon It as evident that it must have been at least a few centuries older than his trope (tenth nestary). But it must be much older stall, As the Loyden Papyres belongs at the latest to the third coutury, and those of the British Massum to the third of fourth century, we are justified in assigning to the first four conturies of the Christian see the origin of our Hebrew test, which throws so vivid a light upon those remeants of Greek Magic buried hatherto in the mil of Egypt, Rerein him also one side of the importance of our text, that it shows how the connection between antiquety and the later ages was maintained. The Greek texts had become [necessable and practically lost to the world, whilst the Habrew text, written in a language which was considered sacred, the knowledge of which was never allowed to be extinguished, preserved the ancient magical tests, with thour curious mystical sames and formulas, and carried them series the centuries, keeping up the old tradition, and affording in now a glimper into a preuliar state of the popular mind of those remarkable topes. The careful study of those Greek fragments side by ride with the Habrew will easist very materially in the understanding also of those often very observe texts, and lift the study from the narrow groove in which it has hitherto been kept by the classical scholars who have devoted their attention recently in them. It will also help us in laying have the foundamen from which flowed the whole of the magical arts of the Muldle Ages.

II. TRANSLATION.

L. The Sward of Mosts.

In the name of the mighty and boly God?

Four angula are appointed to the "Swart" given by the Lord, the Master of mysteries, and they are appointed to the Law, and they see with penetration the mysteries from above and below, and these are their pages—SED HUZI, MRGIOLAL, VHDRZIOLO, TOTRISI. And over these are five ethers, boly and aughty, who meditate on the saysteries of God in the world for caren hours every day, and they are appointed to thousands of thousands, and to myriade of thousands of Charieta, ready to do the will of their Creator, X. the Lord of Lords and the honoured God; these are their names—X. And the Master of each Chariet upon which they are appointed wonders and says; "In these any autobor of his armise?" And the least of these Chariote is lord and master ayer these (shoys) four. And ever these are three chiefs of the hosts of the Lord, who make every day tremble and shake His sight halls, and they have the power ever every creature. Under them stand a double number of Chariota, and the least of them is lord and master over all the above Chiefs (ralors); and these are their assers-X. And the passe of the Lord and hear in K, who site, and all the heavenly hosts kneel, and prostrate themselves before Him daily before leaving I, who is the Lord over all.

And when then conjure him he will attach bisself to then, and some the other five Chiefs and their Charlets, and the lords that stand under them, to attach themselves to thus just so they were ordered to attach themselves to Moses, any of Amram, and to attach to him all the lords that stand under them; and they will not tarry in their obsessions, and will not withhold from giving authority to the man who utters the conjuration over this "Sweed," its mysteries and helden powers, its glory and might, and they will not refuse to do it, as it is the command of God. It enyings "Ye shall not refuse to aboy a mortal who conjures you, nor should you be different to how from what you were to Massa, one of America, when you were commanded to do so, for he to conjuring you with My Ineffable names, and you render benour to My name and not to him. If you should refuse I will been you, for you have not benouved Ms."

Each of three angels had communicated to him (Mosss) a proportions thing for the proper time. These things (words) are all words of the living God and King of the Universe, and they said to bim -

"If then wishout to use this 'Secord' and in transmit it to the following generations, (then know) that the men who decides to use it must first free himself three days previously from secidental pollution and from everything nuclear, set and drink once every evening, and must eat the bread from a pure men or week his hands first in sait (?), and drink only water; and no one is to knew that he autends using this 'Sword,' so therein are the mysteries of the Universe, and they are precised only in secret, and are not communicated but to the charte and pure. On the first day when you retire from (the world) buthe once and no more, and pray three times daily, and after each prayer swite the following Blessing:—

"Bissed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe, who opened the gates of the East and eleaned the windows of the firmament of the Orient, and givest light to the whole world and its schahleasts, with the multitude of His mercies, with His mysteries and secrets, and teachest Thy people ferral Thy secrets and mysteries, and best revealed up to them the "Sword" used by the world; and Thou myest up to them. "If anyone is desirous of using this 'Sword,' by which every wish to fulfilled and every arent travaled, and every mirrols, marvel, and prodigy are performed, then speak to Me in the following manner, read before Me this and that, and conjust in such and each a wice, and I will instantly he prevailed upon and he well desposed towards you, and I will give you authority ever this Sword, by which to fulfil all that you desire, and the Charle will be prevailed upon by you, and my hely once will be well dispeed towards you end they will fulfil instantly your wishes. and will deliver to you my occurs and covered to you my mysteries, and my words they will touch you and my wonders they will manifest to you, and they will listen and sarre you as a papel his master, and your eyes will be illuminated and your heart will ose and bahold all that is halden, and your site will be tuttured." Unto Thee I nell, X, Lord of the Universe. Thou art He who is called X. King of the Universe, Thou art called X, merciful king. Thou art colled X, gracious hing. Then art called X, heing hing, Then art called X, humble long. Thou art called X, righteous king. These art called X lofty king. Thou art called X, perfect king. Thou art celled X, upright king. Then art called X glorious houg. Then art called X, youthful king. Thou are called X, picamat king, Thou art miled X, and thou listenest to my prayer. for Thou hearbriset note prayer and eitach unto me Thy seresate the lords of the "Sword," for Thon art their king, and fulfil my deere, for everything is in Thy hands, as it is written; "Thou opened throw hand and natiofical group living boung with favour."

"I compare you, Askid called X., I conjure you, Arel called X. Ta'annel called X. Tafal called X. and the most glorious of these Yofel Mittree called X. the glory from above. With the permission of my king (I conjure) Yadiel called X. Ra'annel called X. Hannel called X. A'shad called X. Annel called X. A'shad called X. Amubanl called X. and Arnel called X. that you attach yourselves to me and surrender the "Eward" to me, so that I may use it according to my desire, and that I find shelter under the chadow of our Lord in heaven in the glorious Name, the mighty and awe-inspiring X, the twenty-four latters from the Crown, that you deliver unto me with this

"Sword" the secrets from shows and below, the mysteries from shore and below, and my wish be fulfilled and my words hearkened auto, and my prayer (supplication) received. through the conjugation with the Ineffible name of God which is glarified in the world, through which all the hravenly hosts are tied and bound, and this is the Inclinia Name-X, bissed be he! (I conform you) that you shall not refuse me nor hort me, are frighten and alors me, to the tremendous Name of your king, the terror of whom racte upon you, and who is nelled X. Fulfil for me greeything that I have been conjuring you for, and serve ma, for I have conjured you not with the same of one who is great among you but with that of the Lord over all, whose name tree and binds and keeps and factors all the beavenly hosts. And if you should refuse me, I will hand you over to the Lord God and to his Institution name, whose wreth and anger and fire are kindled, who benours his creatures with one letter of his mame, and is called X, so that if you refuse he was thestroy you, and you will not be found when scorehed after. And you preserve the from abortpess of spirit. and weakness of body in the name of X, the guarding of fernal. Blessed art Thou, who understandent the secreta and revealed the mysteries, and art long of the Universe.""

A vacce was based in the beavens, the vacue of the Lord of heavens, enjury: "I want a light (swift) measurer (to go) to man, and if he fulfile my message my cone will become proud of the 'Sword' which I hand over to them, which is the head of all the mysteries of which also my more have spoken, that there will my word he, as it is mid: 'Is not my word like so first each the Lord'" (for. nast, 20). Thus spoke X, the lord of heaven and earth; and I, And Awah and Apragrib, the light (swift) messenger, who are pleased with my messages and delighted with my tending, accorded before Hun, and the Lord over all commanded me. "Go and make this known to men who are plous and good and pure and rightcom and furthful, whose heart is not divided and in whom mostle is no duplicity, who do not lie with their tongues and do not decrease with their Eps, who do not group with their hands and are not lastful with their eyes, who do not ren after evil, keep alcof from every uncleanness, depart from every defilement, keep themselves boly from contamination, and do not approach woman." When the Lord over all commanded me thus, I, K, the swift messenger, went down to earth, and I said on my way: "Where is the man who possesses all these that I should go to him and place this with him?" And I select myself, and thought in my boart that there is no man who would do all thus that I wished; and I found mose, and it was heavy unto me. And the Lord over all conjusted me by His mighty right arm, and by the louise of file glory and His glorious scown, with an cath of His mighty right arm, and He conjured me, and the Lord over all strongthened me and I did not fall. I thus stood up, I. X. to put NN in the possesson of the desired covenant, in the name of X."

"This so the great and glorious Name which has been given as a tradition to man-X, holy, glarious, glorious, Solah. Recite it after thy prayers .- And these are the names of the nogels that estateter to the son of man-Mitteon, Sgråtah, Mattro, Sagotiqtel, etc., etc., etc., (28) hamse)," "In a similar manner shall you serve me KN1 and receive my prayer and my orients, and bring them. to God X, blemed he Ho? for I adjure you in His name, and I estal you (to second), like unto the bird that fives from its port, and remember my meritorious deads before Hem and (reaks Him) forgive now my sine on account of my words of supplication, and you may got refuse me in the name of X, blound be Ral Subsoth, Schools, Solah. His servents married Him and prace Him with emert melody, and easy: " Hely, bely, hely is the Lord of holy name; the whole earth is full of His glory"; and do not refine me, in the same of I, who hver for ever, and in the name of Datamon, etc. X, and in the name X of the great Cop from whom nothing is hidden, who seem and is not seen, and in the name of Him who is the chief over the bouvens and is called X. And the King of the Universe utters (this memo) also in a different manner, thus—X. You swift memonger, do not turry and do not frighten me, but some and do all my wants in the name of X, the great One, who sees and is not seen, AHYH, whose Ineffable Name is revealed to the howeverly bests; and I conjure you by this Ineffable Name, such as it was revealed to Moses by the mouth of the Lord away all, X, the Lord Sebasth is His name. Bloomd art thou, O God, lord of mighty acts, who knownest all the mysteries."

And which are the letters which X communicated to Moses? He said to him: "If then wishest to get wise and to use the "Sweed," call use, and conjure me, and strongthen me, and fertify me, and my t "X, with the great, hely, wonderful, pure, precious, glorious, and une-inspiring secret Name X, with these letters I conjure these to surrender to me and make use wise and ottach to me the angula which minutes to the "Sword," in the name of the Revealer of mysteries. Amon."

Write with ink on buther and many about with you during three three days of purification, and invoke before and after prayer the following Names communicated to Moses by Mrgnal, X, by Trotpus, X, etc. (the 13 Chiefs mentioned at the beginning, and a long string of other mysterious pames which are said to have been some municated to Moses). "And they have not hidden from him any of these secred Incheble passes or letters, and have not given him instead the Substitutes of any of these moved letters, for thus were they ordered by the Lord of all mysteries to sommunicate to him this "Sword," with these Names which constitute the mysteries of this 'Sopri', and they mud to him, 'Command the generations which will tome after thee to say the following bleming prior to their prayer, lost they he ewept away by the dru's "lillowed art Thou, X, who wast with Mores; he also with me, Then, whose name is X. Send me X, who is the cover of the Charabim, to belp me. Blussed art Thou, Lord of the Sword." "

Whoever is desirous of ming this 'Sword' must regit his

used prayers, and at the passage "Thou burks set to prayer" may "I conjuge you four princes, X, corrects of like your, K, that you receive my invecation before I pray, and my ampplication before I cutrest, and fulfil all my wishes through this "Sword," as you have done to Massa, in the glorious said wonderful name of the Lord of wonders, which is interpreted, thes-X." He must then call the five superior Charle and ony : "I conjure you, X, that you accept toy conjuration as enon as I conjure you, and you attack to me those four princes and all the houte of Charlots over which you preside, to fulfil all my wishes through this 'Hword' by this beloved name X." He must then call the three angels that are superior to these, and say "I conjure you, X, the beloved of X, who is Hadsrician, that you attach yourselves to me and attack to me X, who are standing under your rule, to fulfit all my wishes through this 'Sword by this unique name X." And then he must lay held of the highest Ohief ever all and my "I conjum thee, X, strong and powerful Chief over all the heavenly boots, that then attachest thyself to me, thee and not thy messenger, and attach to me all the Chiefe that are with thee, to faith my wishes through this "Sword," by the name X, which has no substitute, for thou art beloved and he is beloved, and I am from the need of Abraham called the beloved. Blessod art thou, King of the expeterion, Lord of the secreta, who hearkenest unto prayer."

And he is not to touch this "Eword" are he has done all these things, afterwards he will be able to do whatever he likes, everything being written here following in its proper order.

IL. This is the "Second."

(It consists of a series of psysterious names of God or angula, to which the recipes in Part III refer. The first list commensus with Tobat, Tetr, etc. (1-5). These numbers are added by use to make the formulae run psychol with their enginest applications in Part III, as already explained in the Introduction. I refer to them as they break up this part in convenient smaller portions, and are easily discernible. After these follow the words : " With these year Names, and with the powers you possess, to which there is nowhere anything like (I conjure you) to show me and to search for me, and to bring see X to do all my helding in the terms of X," and, again, a list of names, that have no special characteristic in coramon. Nos. 20-24 are all parom commeneng with JJ; some of these fault with JH. 21-36 all these names have the word Selecth stinched to them. To 41-47 HVH is added. From Nos. 51-93 all the names are composite; they appear as names of man, the name of the father being added to such of thems, close were 160 names, e.g. : Regers, son of Brugus : Sogn, and of "Arguis : Atumi, on of Beteral; Abests, one of Kkthus; Agept, son of Abkmi, etc. Every those from 102 on to the end of this part finishes with -cl, after which follow varying syllables and words: some are only JH or JV (Nos. 102-105), or a word commencing with 'A- and finishing with -JH (Nos. 106-111). Nos. 113-12) are followed by AHVII, whilst 122-127 = JHVRH, and Nos. 128-134 = HVJH. They conclude with the fellowing words, "Ye secred angels, princes of the hosts of X, who slated upon the thrones prepared for them before Him to watch over and to minimize to the "Sward," to fulfil by it all the wants by the name of the Master over all; you Chiefs of all the angels in the world, X, in the same of X the seal of heaven and earth, minuters of X the most high God; through you I see X in the world, you are larding over me in all the place of the Master over all I pray of you to do everything that I am making of you, so you have the power to do everything in heaven and upon earth in the name of X, as it is written in the Law, "I am the Lord, this is My name ! *** replied) "In that hour when I wish to attach him to me and to employ him, I sit and fact on that very day; but prior to it one must keep escall free for seven days from any noctornal impurity, and ment bathe in the fenetain of water, and not speak at all during those seven days, and at the end of this parification, on the day of the fact, be must sit in the water up to his threat, and before he atters the confuration he must first my, "I conjure you, angels of dread, feer, and shaking, who are appointed to hart those who are not pure and clean and deare the services of my heavenly servante-I conjure you in the name of X. who is mighty over all, and rules over all, and everything is in His hands, that you do not hart see, nor terrify me, nor frighten me, verily, in the name of the powerful, the head of . . . After this he may commonso his coninvalion, for now he has fortified himself and has evaled binsielf with the name of God of 49 letters, before which all who hear it trouble and are frightened, and the beavenly hosts are terror-struck. He must then again contars, and say 'X, chief, who of all the destroying sagels is the most hertful and burning, with this Name and in this wer I call thee AVZIIIA, angel of the Presence, youthful menuter before the Kurg of the Universe, who art a propos and chief of the heavenly horie; I conjure thee and decree upon thee that thou attachest threelf to me to fulfil my with and to accept the decree of my conjugation and to accompanies my desires and fulfil my washes, and do not frighten me, nor terrify me, nor overswe see, and do not make my frame abake and my feet vacillate, nor more my speech to be perverted; but may I be fortified sod atrengthened, and may the conjunction be effective and the (secred) Name ultered property by my threat, and may no racillation take hold of me and no trembling of the feet by thy amoutering angels confuse use and overswe me, and weaken my hands, and may I not be overcouse by the fire and figure of the storm and whichwind which precedes thee, O wonderful and exalted one, whose Ineffable name of X, of whose wrath the earth trambles, and nothing can withstand his anger, twice blessed. Again I conjum these by thy 14 (!) names by which those didst reveal threal to thy prophete and cours, to place in their months sweet words of prophery and to atter pleasant words, and there are the Incliable names and their outsames (Kunya): Sperit Pokonnit, kunya, X; Attmon, kunya, X; Piakso (?), Hagren, kanya, X ; Sanigron, kunya, X ; Mai, kunya, X ; Mohon, hunya, X; Asten, hunya, X; Shire, konya, X; thossel, kunya, X; Iodel, kunya, X; Sancelosh, kunya, X. Engishah, kunya, X. Zabdiel, kunya, X. I conjure ther with these fourteen pamer, by which all the ecerets and mysteries and wars are scaled and accomplished, and which are the foundations of boaven and carth. Four of these are cagraved upon the heads of the Hayoth (Holy Croatures). mamoly-X, the lord of powers; X, master of margolas, X, master of purity, and X, master of the yels. And four are cagrared upon the four sides of the Turone, namely-X, three tumes hely: X, Adir, Adiri, Adiron, etc., the king of hungs. And four are corrected upon the four growth of the Ofenius (wheels) that stand against the Haly Creatures, as it is said: "When those went, those went; and when those stood, these stood" (Each, i, 21), and these they are -X, who is the mightiset over all ; X, who reles over all the inhabitants of the heights (f), and in whose hauds everything is. And two are sograved apon the grown of the most exalted and high King, and these they are-X, before whom every knee bends and every mouth ulters praises; X, header how there is no God and helper With those tames I conjure thee, and firmly decree upon thes to descend quickly to me, N, son of N, thou and not thy messager. And when thes comest down do not turn my mind, but reveal unto me all the secret mysteries from above and beneath, and the hidden secrets from above and beneath, and all the secrets of wisdom and the remning of helpfulness, just as a man speaks to his neighbour. For I have conjured thee with these Names, that are great and megbry and wooderful and awe-inspiring, and proved and arranged in proper order, through which the plurious throne has been established and the beautiful sent of the Most High, which has been wonderfully wrought, long before thou and the heavenly heats had been counted, "While as yet He had not made the certh nor the fields, and the inhabitants of the earth and the creatures therein." (Prov. viii, 26).

well mil thee further by (the power) of the five selected Names, to which only one is enquerier, and this is their form-X. I conjury then by these five Names. which correspond to the five names of God, whose letters are written on burning fire, and they girele round the throne of glory, one seconding and the other descending, so that the angels of the Presence should not behold them, and this is their equivalent and form and glory-X. I conture there by these, as thou knowest their praise and greatness, which so mouth can atter, and no car can bear, no, not even one of them. Thou hast been commanded and ordered by the Most High: "ne some se then hearest anyone conjuring thee with these names, to do hopeth to My Name, and to descrad quickly and fulfill the Wish of the man who makes they bear them ! but if then terriest I will push thee into the flery river Rigayon and place another in the stend." Do it. therefore, for Ilio Name, and come quickly to me, N. con of N, not in a terror, and not in fear, not with flory coals, not with hailstone, and not with the sheet and treasures of enow, and not with the howling of the storm. and not with the provinces of the whirlwind that usually necompany thee, and do my bidding and falfil my desire, for everything is in thy hand; by the permission of thy Gad, the master over all and thy lord, and with His Names I conjure thre to attach thyself quickly to me; come and fulfil my wish, and do not turry.

"I forther call ther with the grantest of thy Names, the pleasant and beloved one, which is the same as that of thy Master, save one letter, with which He created and formed averything, and which He placed as a wal upon all the work of His hand; and thus is its equivalent—X, and the other in the language of purity (permutations of the letters You. He) is read as I. I conjure then with the right hand of ametity and with His beloved Name, in whose honour everything has been prested, and all are terrorstruck by He snighty arm, and all the sone of the internal heavenly cohert (esevente) tremble and shake of Hit frat, which in X, and its equivalent by means of JHVH is X. Blowed be the name of His glorious kingdom for over and ever. And all praise and extol thy Name, for they love thou. I conjers thee, and decree upon thee firmly, not to ducbey my words, and not to alter my decree and my decision with which I conjured thee, and decreed upon thee, and setablished in peace. In the Name X, blassed be the name of the glorious kingdom for ever and ever, depart in peace, and do not frighten me in the bout of thy departure; in the name X. Lord, most high and holy, in the name of the Lord of Husta, the God of Israel's bettellops ; in the name of the boly living Creatures, and in the name of the Wheels of the Charlet, and in the same of the river of fire. Th, Zii, Ziiu, and all Hu trinisters, and in the name of 111, Zue, Hatmorb, Z. El Z. Shaddal E. X revealed Himself on Mount Situs in the glory of His majorty.

"" With these Names, terrible and mighty, which darken the ena, and obscure the more, and turn the sea, and break the rocks, and extragaish the light, I conjure you, spirits, and and obidden, and Satemen, that you depart and disappear from N, son of N."

APPENDIX II,

I. Against as every.—I call three, aril apirit, cruel spirit, metalican spirit. I call three, but spirit, who sittest in the comptery and taken away healing from man. Go and place a hunt in NN's bend, in his eyes, in his month, in his tangens, in his threat, in his wandpape; put passengers water as his hally. If you do not go and put water in his belly, I will send against you the evil angels Punel, Gassel, Padial, Presel. I call thee and thou six knots that you go quarkly to MN and put passworm water in his tally and hill NN whom I thous (or, because I wish it). Atmes, Amon. Salah.

II. Aponest an enemy.-Write upon a new-laid ogg on a Manarche cometery . " I conjure you, luminaries of braves. and earth, as the housens are esparated from the earth, so separate and davids NN from his wife NN, and separate there from one enother, as life is separated from douth, and our from dry land, and water from fire, and mountain from vale, and night from day, and light from darkness, and the our from the mosa; thus aspects NN from NN his wife, and experses them from one another in the same of the twelve house of the day and the three watches (?) of the night, and the seron days of the week, and the thirty doys of the month, and the error years of Shomitah, and the fifty years of Julaha, on every day, in the name of the avil angel Transmel, and in the users of the angel Inbial, and in the name of the angel Dremiel, and in the name of the angel Zahbuk, and in the name of the angel Ataf, and in the name of the eagel Zhemael, and in the name of the angul Zenial, who preside ever pains, sharp paint, inflammation, and dropsy, and separate NN from his wife NN, make them depart from one another, and that they should not comfort one another, swiftly and quickly,"
